1. Tell us the story behind 936 Pennies, and how the book came to be.
2. You write that parenthood acts as a mirror for each of us. Say more about that.
3. For many moms and dads, parenting feels like an endless journey of dirty clothes, restless children, exhaustion, and frustration. How can we find those sacred moments in the middle of day-to-day experiences?
4. You have some powerful things to share about overcoming fear. Tell us how you've faced fear in your own parenting journey.
5. How did you balance investing time in your husband and children while investing time in writing a book?
6. Speak to the parent who has already spent most of their 936 pennies. What can they reflect on or change going forward?
7. How will a single parent be able to relate to and gain value from this idea?
8. What are two Scriptures that you lean on when seeking to raise your children intentionally?
9. How do you handle those days when you feel like you have failed to invest your time in your kids well?
10. What were some of your biggest doubts throughout the book-writing journey? How did you overcome those?
11. What are some baby steps parents can take to begin implementing this idea of investing in their kids?
12. What do you want parents to walk away with after reading your book?
