1. How did you first get involved in prophetic ministry?
2. How have you been able to increase in the prophetic?
3. Your introduction mentions that you wrote this book for those who want to be stewards of their prophetic gift. Why was this important for you to note?
4. There is a price to pay for the gift of prophecy. From your own perspective, what is the cost of this gift?
5. How should a prophet respond when God's calling seems to pull them away from the life they know and love, much like the story of Abram?
6. What hindrances might a prophet face when trying to grow in their spiritual gift?
7. When discussing the making of a prophet, you say, "the making can start before the calling." Why do these two things often occur separately?
8. Where do you recommend prophets seek out training resources?
9. What do you hope readers will have gained by the time they reach the last chapter of this book?
10. Where can people go to learn more about you and your book?
