Do your kids feel heard?

How to Listen So Your Kids Will Talk Deepen Your Connection and Strengthen Their Confidence by Becky Harling

Whether their children are extroverted or introverted, argumentative or passive, all parents face the challenge of getting to know their kids' hearts. In order to do so, parents need to create a relationship that allows their children to feel heard and valued. In her new book, How to Listen So Your Kids Will Talk, Becky Harling gives parents the key to deeper connection with their child: listening.

Becky says there are three keys for a great relationship with your children: "Seek God for wisdom, listen with the goal of understanding, and become a student of your child so that your knowledge of their unique personality grows."

Using Becky's sound counsel, parents will learn how to set their children up for success by

- helping them express their feelings in healthy ways,
- listening to affirm their strengths,
- modeling how to navigate conflict with grace, and
- listening to God, knowing that He "bends down to listen" to us (Psalm 116:2 NLT).

"How to Listen So Your Kids Will Talk is truly a treasure. Becky Harling reminded me of things I needed to do better and gave me positive principles to put into practice."

—Tricia Goyer, bestselling author of more than 75 books, including The Grumble-Free Year and Calming Angry Kids

"I don't know anyone who wouldn't benefit from reading this book."

—Jim Burns, PhD, president of HomeWord and author of Doing Life with Your Adult Children
