Minneapolis, MN—The top name in inspirational romantic suspense, Dee Henderson, releases the next installment in the series her fans have been asking for since her O'MALLEY saga. The first in the series, Traces of Guilt, was a USA Today bestseller and a #1 ECPA bestseller. Library Journal praised its “twisty plot” and “gripping storyline.”

Already, enthusiastic reviews are coming in for the next in the series. Publishers Weekly said of Threads of Suspicion, “All of these mysteries take unexpected, intriguing turns on their way to a satisfying finale that, nevertheless, leaves enough open doors to make fans eager for yet another installment,” and RT Book Reviews said it keeps readers “engaged and fascinated until the ultimate resolution.” Threads of Suspicion delivers a page-turning plot, high stakes, and new revelations for characters readers have already come to love.

With the public eye fixed on the governor's new Missing Persons Task Force, Detective Evie Blackwell and her new partner, David Marshal, are under pressure to produce results. They are assigned to a pair of unrelated cases in suburban Chicago, and while both involve persons now missing for several years, the cases couldn't be more different. While Evie opens old wounds in a close-knit neighborhood to find a missing college student, David searches for a private investigator working for a high-powered client. As they get closer to the truth, Evie and David's conviction that justice is truly possible for all will be tested to the limit.

“Henderson plays the faith card with subtlety, allowing the detectives to apply their beliefs to both their jobs and personal lives, and displays her usual keen understanding of the human psyche, delving into potential motives for murder as easily as she explores Evie's reluctance to commit.”
